*“7 Things Your Teenager Won’t Tell
You....and How to Talk About Them Anyway”*

YES, YOU CAN TALK WITH YOUR TEENAGER

Every teenager keeps secrets. If you’re like most parents, you worry about what your kids don’t tell you.

Author Jenifer Lippincott offers a deceptively simple plan for talking to your kids that’s based on a simple set of rules:

Teens need to stay safe, show respect, and keep in touch.

While these three simple rules may not guarantee a smooth ride through adolescence, they can ease some of the stresses that tend to ambush our teens—and us—as we all struggle toward (their) adulthood.

Jenifer Marshall Lippincott has over twenty years experience working with adolescents as a high school English teacher, a dean at a boarding school and a learning consultant. She has observed, counseled and researched teens extensively in a quest to understand their quirky, honest and unpredictable behaviors. She serves on the Pediatric Alliance for a Boston hospital, the Board of Trustees of a Boston area school and is a Fellow of the Society of Applied Learning. She is a frequent speaker and adviser to parent groups on adolescent issues. She has appeared on The Today Show, NPR and numerous other radio and television programs, and is often quoted in publications such as The New York Times, The New York Post, USA Today, The Boston Globe, The Philadelphia Inquirer, The Chicago Tribune, and The Miami Herald. She is also a contributing expert for several websites, including Club Mom, and We Believe in Girls. She holds a Master's Degree in human development from Harvard University. She lives in Washington, DC with her husband and two adolescent daughters.
